Question: May a firm add to its letterhead the name of a deceased relative who has never practiced with the firm, or the name of a retired or disabled lawyer who has never practiced with the firm?

Answer: No.

OPINION

Insofar as the question relates to “taking over another lawyer’s practice”, it was answered in KBA E-83 (1974). The question of adding the names of lawyer relatives was answered in the negative in ABA Informal Opinion C-730.

In light of the more recent opinions from other jurisdictions reaching the same result, as well as the plain language of the Code, we answer the questions in the negative.
